

CIO of the Year: Megabyte Finalists

Technology executives from organizations with 1000 or less employees

Philip A. Casale Jr. CIO, Buchanan Ingersoll & Rooney, P.C.

Phil is the Chief Information Officer for Buchanan Ingersoll & Rooney. Phil worked closely with the firm's executives, Board of Directors and shareholders to achieve the firm strategic business goals pertaining to client service, innovation, and efficiencies. In addition to the firm's technology services areas, Phil also oversees and directs the firm's records in research services, along with their litigation technology services and document services areas. Phil has over 30 years experience in the field of technology and consulting in a served in previous leadership and professional capacities over his career in other industries besides legal.

Since inception, Buchanan Ingersoll & Rooney has been dedicated to providing client service and partnership marked by legal excellence, sound judgment and understanding of their clients' needs, direct and honest communication and common-sense practice. Their roots have shaped their work ethic and integrity. With approximately 500 attorneys and government relations professionals in the firm, they cover all the bases. They take a personal approach to getting to know every client and work hard to understand their needs, expectations, and concerns.

David DiLeo, CIO, Industrial Scientific

David DiLeo is the current CIO at Industrial Scientific after joining the company as Global Director, Information Technology in 2013. He is an accomplished IT executive committed to optimizing and effectively running the business of IT. He brings deep experience and expertise in digital transformation, IoT, SaaS, ERP, CRM, PLM, application development, business intelligence, QA, IT security, infrastructure and global support within Fortune 50/500 and mid-sized global organizations. Result-oriented with a proven track record of project delivery, DiLeo reshapes IT functions and capabilities to consistently deliver maximum business value. He is adept at aligning IT and business strategies and creating flexible IT operating models that scale to meet business demand. Furthermore, he is customer-focused and operates with an emphasis on continuous process improvement.

Industrial Scientific Corp. designs and manufactures gas monitoring instruments and other related products. It offers include portable multi gas, area monitors and docking stations. The company was founded by Kent McElhattan in 1985 and is headquartered in Pittsburgh, PA.

Gregg Gualtieri, CTO, USG Insurance Services

Gregg Gualtieri has 40 years of experience in IT with the last 14 years spent with USG Insurance Services where he now holds the Chief Technology Officer position. He has built the IT department for USG and leads and manages it to this day with responsibilities including information systems, networks, software development, help desk, communications, IT vendor relationships, and Executive Management Team member.

USG is a national wholesale broker and managing general agent (MGA) with 19 offices across the country. It represents a variety of A rated insurance carriers both admitted and non-admitted. USG is an MGA for 19 carriers and works with over 260 different brokerage markets writing business in all states.